From F. A. Vaughan's Civil War Diary

Leaving the mouth of the Rio Grande River for New Orleans

- ~July 28, 1862, Group 1 sailed for New Orleans, arrived August 23, 1862

“But they [Confederates] found it out and made an attempt to capture them after they got aboard the schooner but failed. They got off without the captain of the schooner and the mate didn't know anything about navigating the sea & got lost and was out twenty six days & they had several storms on them during the time. ... almost come to the conclusion that they was lost for good when they was picked up by a Man of War & brought in ... .”

From F. A. Vaughan's Civil War Diary

August 1862, Group 2 in Matamoros waiting for ship to New Orleans

"... rocked along & tried to enjoy ourselves the best way we could. ...

I cautioned the boys not to have anything to do with it [a "fandango" in the town square] or go about it for if they did there was a strong probability of getting into difficulty. But they wouldn't heed to what I said and went their own way."

"And the result was one of the men that was staying with us got in a row with some Mexicans & killed two just between our house and the dancing ground."

From F. A. Vaughan's Civil War Diary

August 1862, Group 2 in Matamoros waiting for ship to New Orleans (cont'd.)

"This caused a greate excitement. The rest of us were shut up in the house asleep. The Mexicans gathered all round our house and raved and charged and broke in all the doors of the houses on the side of the square where we was but they didn't breake in ours as they knew we had several guns in there & they supposed it to be death to a good many of them."

"And so it would be for we knew that if they broke in on us they would slaughter us although we was as inosent of the act that had taken place as an infant."

Dec. 31, 1862, Aboard Steamship Cumbra Heading for Galveston

"... we left on the 31st of December with light hearts for Texas on the steamship Cumbra"

"... Then came sickness and unpleasantness but we endured it patiently for the thought that we was going to Texas where everything that was near and dear to us was encircled by its borders – and whom we had not seen for months nor not even heard from our wives and little ones whom I would lay my life down for made us more anxious to reach that state."
